

FACT SHEET: BALLOTS FOR ALL

Improving Language Access for Nevada Voters

INTRODUCTION

In 2021, Assembly Bill 321 was enacted, requiring all county and city clerks to send every active registered voter a mail ballot before a primary or general election. This was a massive win for Nevada voters in making our elections more accessible. However, for this benefit to truly reach every Nevada voter, election officials must offer ballots and voting materials in the languages that Nevadans read and speak. There is a great need for these services. Nevada voters are diverse, and that diversity is growing.

For this benefit to truly reach every Nevada voter, election officials must offer ballots and voting materials in the languages that Nevadans read and speak.

Section 203 of the Voting Rights Act (VRA) requires that a state or a local jurisdiction must provide voting materials to the following communities: American Indian, Alaskan Native, Asian American, and Hispanic. All of these communities have historically faced barriers to the ballot box, but in order to qualify for a federal mandate, a community must meet a threshold of 10,000 citizens or make up 5% of the voting age of one of the groups listed in a local jurisdiction such as a county, city, or municipality; speak the same language; and be limited in English proficiency (LEP) to be provided voting materials in another language, per Section 203 of the VRA.¹ The Department of Justice recognizes that by providing election information and materials, "all citizens will have an effective opportunity to register, learn the details of the elections, and cast a free and effective ballot."²

In Nevada, only two counties, Clark and Nye, are required per Section 203 of the Voting Rights Act. to comply with federal requirements. Washoe County is the only jurisdiction that voluntarily provides bilingual ballots and voting information in Spanish. On December 8, 2021, the Department of Justice released these language determinations for jurisdictions required to comply with Section 203 of the VRA. Chinese speakers in Clark County and Spanish speakers in Washoe County have narrowly missed out on being covered by federal legal requirements that materials be offered in those languages.³

Counties in Nevada that are required to comply with section 203 and the languages in which they provide election materials:

- Clark County: Spanish and Tagalog
- Nye County: Shoshone⁺

471,016 Nevadans who are over the age of 18 reported speaking a language other than English, and 135,442 have a limited ability to read, speak, write, or understand English. This is known as being Limited English Proficient (LEP).⁵ A voter's limited English proficiency should not restrict their right to vote.

For a large number of Nevada voters, English is not their primary language, and they would prefer to receive election-related information in their native language. Nevada legislators have an opportunity, this session, to create a policy that goes beyond federal guidelines and create a more inclusive democracy.

FACTS ON LANGUAGE

Nevada voters are diverse, and that diversity is growing. The 2020 census ranked Nevada as the third-most diverse state in the country, with the fourth-largest population of residents who identify as Asian and Pacific Islander (AAPI) and the fifth-largest population who identify as Hispanic.⁶ When compared to 2010 data, both communities have significantly increased in just a decade; the AAPI population grew 45.6%, and the Hispanic community grew 24.3%.⁷

- 29.9% of the population speak a language other than English at home.⁸
- 19.2% of the population is foreign-born, with 51.9% being naturalized citizens.⁹
- 471,016 Nevadans who are over the age of 18 reported speaking a language other than English, including 291,828 Spanish speakers and 179,188 speakers of other languages.
- 135,442 Nevadans over the age of 18 are LEP.¹⁰
- The top two non-English languages spoken in Nevada are Spanish (69%) and Tagalog (10%).¹¹
- In Nevada's rural counties—13 out of 15—more than 3% of the voting-age citizen population speak Spanish.¹²

A voter's limited English proficiency should not restrict their right to vote.

LEGISLATIVE LANGUAGE ACCESS RECOMMENDATIONS

The Nevada Legislature and secretary of state must do more to make voting accessible. Here are different ways to ensure voter language accessibility:

- Provide voter education materials and election updates in Spanish, Tagalog, Mandarin, Vietnamese, Korean, Thai, and other languages as needed.
- Provide a hotline number that voters can call year-round to receive interpretation or translation assistance about voting information and voting assistance.
- Add Chinese and Tagalog as options for the online voter registration system and as language preferences that voters may select.
- Establish a Language Access Advisory Committee or add language-access-focused positions to the Advisory Committee on Participatory Democracy.
- Allocate funding for the translation of voter education materials and for county clerks to provide facsimile ballots (in-person paper ballots) in multiple languages, based on a county's voter population whose primary language is not English.

AB 246, sponsored by Assemblywoman Selena Torres, will aim to ensure voter language accessi-bility through these measures and more.

Nevada's democracy benefits when our officials commit to and invest in holding elections in which all their citizens can participate, regardless of their ability to read or speak English. Together, our officials can ensure that Nevadans who do not speak English as their primary language and are LEP voters are given access to and are encouraged to participate in elections where they can vote comfortably and knowledgeably.
